U.S. Senate Candidate Daniel Lewis Supports the Fair Tax

Nashville, Tennessee, April 12, 2008 – Daniel Lewis, the Libertarian Party of Tennessee’s candidate for United States Senate, recognizes the importance of shifting the bulk of federal spending to the market sector, which realistically would take a number of years to complete. During this time, Congress should replace the current tax system with The Fair Tax. Once elected, Daniel Lewis would co-sponsor The Fair Tax Act (HR 25/S 1025) as an intermediate step to reducing government spending and elimination of the IRS. The Fair Tax changes tax laws to replace all federal income taxes with a national retail sales tax. The proposal also calls for a monthly payment to all households of citizens and legal resident aliens (based on family size) as an advance rebate of tax on purchases up to the poverty level. This payment might well have to potential of significantly reducing the number of individuals that currently depend on welfare, by moving them above the poverty level. It might be advisable to amend the Fair Tax act to allow for an additional rebate for those who send their children to a non-government operated and funded school or home school their children. Developing a sound monetary policy will increase the offset of the Fair Tax effect. The Fair Tax doesn’t deal specifically with the spending problem, so this must be dealt with separately. As spending is brought under control, the rate of the Fair Tax should be diminished and eventually phased out.
